Introduction

The Treaties establishing the European Communities provided for a limited number of committees to help the Council and the Commission in their work. The Council and the Commission have since found it necessary to form other committees to help them with the introduction of the common policies provided for in the Treaties.

This list of the standing committees as at 31 October 1980 is published in response to frequent requests from Members of the European Parliament, universities and others concerned with the operation of the Communities.

The list does not include those Council working parties and Commission expert groups which have not been set up by any formal act and whose existence may well be terminated at short notice (this applies especially to Commission expert groups).

For the reader's convenience, an effort has been made to classify the committees according to both form and subject-matter. As some committees have more than one function, they may appear under more than one heading. On the other hand, they may be listed only once if one of their functions predominates, i.e. under the heading which relates to their principal function.

The list will be updated in due course.

3. Regulatory committees

- (i) 'Net' procedure: These committees operate in the same way as the management committees in the case of favourable opinions.

Where the committee delivers an unfavourable opinion or fails to deliver any opinion, the Commission submits a proposal to the Council. If the Council fails to reach a decision within a specified time (usually 3 months), the Commission adopts the proposed measures.
